Possibilities for Girls

Canning Clubs Making Over Rural Life and Suggest Great Possibilities for Girls.

The canning clubs, mother-daughter clubs, and other similar organizations, which are so numerous in the rural districts, are doing much to keep the girls in the country. They are beginning to discuss the possibilities of the rural life, and the girls are beginning to realize that the place as a home maker, and not as a social creature, is the one that will give them the most satisfaction and the most opportunity for growth.

The next year over 200 girls were enrolled in the canning clubs, and the girls are beginning to realize that the place as a home maker, and not as a social creature, is the one that will give them the most satisfaction and the most opportunity for growth.

Even Santa Claus Feels the Effect of European War

Photos by American Press Association.

1—Old man making Christmas toys in New York. 2—Painting the children. 3—Modeling from clay. 4—Trimming the woodwork. 5—Interior view of workshop. 6—The completed product.

So securely has the European war gripped the entire world that even the north pole failed to escape. Santa has had to fall in line with the trend of modern times and turn out munitions of war, instead of the traditional toys of the past. He has devised this year submarines that really drive, warships with real guns and various anti-air craft guns of all calibers.

The United States, of course, has missed the supply of toys that usually comes from Germany, but American manufacturers have met the situation and have supplied the deficit. As a result, during the holiday season, the most prosperous that the country has experienced in some years, the sale of toys will probably be the largest in history.

One charitable New York organization hit upon a scheme that proved most profitable and also delighted the hearts of old men who scarcely remember ever having met Santa Claus. In a factory he employed only old and decrepit men—those too old to engage in more active work—and for months past they have been making all kinds of toys for the children. And they have been enabled to introduce their own children to Santa.

There will be no disappointment when Christmas mornin' arrives and the youngsters at home steal from the beds at sunrise to see if their tree has blossomed into toys overnight. War or no war, the American agents of Santa Claus are busy preparing for Christmas, and the branches of the tree will be as heavy as ever.

Torland is a dependency of the German empire, and although Torland has maintained a strict neutrality throughout the war, the effects of the terrible struggle are just as evident there as in any other country in the world. Germany contains the toy shops of the world, and now that Germany is busy with her military American children will have to do without them. This is where you make your mistake.

Torland is no German province, but a world empire itself, with as many colonies and big cities in the United States as anywhere else under the sun. Figures show that there are 224 toy establishments in this country, producing $4,000,000 worth of toys, or just one-half of the total American consumption. Moreover, the output includes some of the most popular inventions that have been devised. Consider imitation uniforms. It would naturally be thought that Germany, despite a 35 per cent duty. Lead soldiers and the dainty blouse dolls and the diminutive automobiles and even so many inexpensive toys that are fashioned from metal all come from the Black Forest and from famous Nuremberg. Will the children have to go without these gifts, of which they seem never to grow weary?

From the looks of things old Santa has been unusually ingenious. Torland has been unusually ingenious. Durable toys have seen many changes. Toys look different, mechanical toys have seen many changes. Toys look different, mechanical toys have seen many changes. Toys look different, mechanical toys have seen many changes.

Things that have made up toyland heretofore is not to be found. Nearly everything that has caused smiles and joy in years past is to be found again this time, but there are so many new things that the general aspect of the happy toyland is different. The practical, instead of articles of more amusement, predominates among toys this year. Things meant to cause rite amusement have taken a back seat, while things which cause study, work or amusement along practical lines, as well as smiles and enjoyment, occupy the foreground and are expected to meet with the best results in the general Christmas rush.

Mechanical construction toys, engines with interesting parts, toys that arouse curiosity, dolls that cause little girls to learn about dress and care, games that cause study, research and concentration, doll houses which have parts that create interest in housekeeping, animals which cause interest and study and toys of all classes which have something more than life amusement in their makeup are rated in the stores as the best sellers.

Nobody as watches the trend of the times as does old Santa Claus, and there is no better store to note progress in the world affairs than in his toyland. In the mighty workshop in the frigid north some of the greatest brains in the world are busy scheming new toys for the annual holiday season. As a result there is but little new in the word that does not make its mark in Toyland in the form of something to entertain or educate the youngsters of the country.

Wonderful changes in dolls are noted this year. Character babies with skin, hair, moving arms, legs and tongue and other new and distinguishing features hold full sway. The old dolls still in a back number, as are also a large extent some of the character dolls and babies.

New "Glider" Skims Above Water at Speed Of Fifty Miles an Hour, Breaking Records

The Yolanda II, on Her First Trip.

A "GLIDER" is something new in boats of the hydroplane variety. Imagine driving a high-powered automobile over the surface of the water at fifty miles an hour and you have a fair idea of what riding in a glider is like. You are not flying, but you are doing something much more fascinating than motoring and are about as safe.

The Yolanda II, the first "glider" ever built in America, made its first trip down the Hudson river recently. It covered the twenty-two miles from New York to New York in a few seconds more than half an hour, and it ran so smoothly that the eight passengers all found in easy chairs inside the big limousine body as comfortable as if they had been riding in a private car over the best laid road in the United States. Nothing could be more simple in construction. Take an unobtainable life raft made of six cork filled containers, fit it with a motor driven screw to an ordinary automobile steering wheel, and at the stern mount two big propellers, like those used on the new battle planes of the allies, and you have a machine that alone over the surface of the water at almost any speed.

When not in motion the Yolanda II draws five inches of water, but as soon as the motor is running the glider over the surface with an inch of water of draft, just like a quail through the river, passing fast motorboats as if they had been standing still, the idea of propelling a boat by a tiny screw under water seemed absurd. The air-driven boat, it is predicted, will revolutionize river navigation. No matter how shallow, every stretch of open water is a potential highway open for the most rapid kind of transit. The river is a road—a road that will never wear out and never need repair.

The Yolanda II is the idea of a wealthy Colombian, Señor Gonzalo Melia, who some years ago determined to equip a quick river service down the Magdalena river between Bogotá and the coast, about 200 miles. He came to the United States, but the shipbuilders he saw told him the demand for a boat making thirty knots or better an hour and drawing only a few inches of water was impracticable. One day he saw a dispatch saying that in a test of a hydroplane in France the machine had skimmed above the surface of the water at high speed several hundred yards before rising in the air. He at once wrote to Louis Heriot, the French aviator, and asked him if a boat could not be built on the idea of aeroplane propulsion, but to glide on the water. Heriot said he thought it could, and Melia took the boat steamer for Paris.

Heriot built a boat to meet Mr. Melia's specifications, and, although it made forty-six miles an hour, it was not commercially practical. It was a one passenger affair and too light to bear packing and transportation to Colombia. He had another boat built on stronger lines, which he took with him to South America and tested on the Magdalena. But the French constructors had insisted upon a submerged screw in addition to the air propellers, and the boat drew too much water and was too small for his purpose.

Hearing that the Comte de Lambert, who had seen Heriot's speed boat, was making experiments with a pump-ton glider and had formed a company to manufacture the "bateaux glisseurs de Lambert," Mr. Melia went back to Paris in 1914 to see the new boat and get a modified model for use in Colombia, but the war broke out, and the orders were taken by the French government.

Mr. Melia then went to New York and met Dr. Lacapelle, a boat builder and engineer of New York, who designed and built the Yolanda II. The boat was shipped to Colombia and will be used to carry the mails and government mail, and the passengers and the cargo. It will make the trip easily in two days instead of seven days that the rear boats which have now in use take.

PREDICTS 20,000,000 DEATHS

"Two years of war will mean the destruction of the lives of 20,000,000 persons in Europe," said Dr. Louis Pasteur, speaking at the Royal Sanitary Institute in London.

Dr. Dunlop advocated the encouragement of parental prudence among the young. He forecast a serious rise in the death rate over the next year or two. It would be far better for many children that they had never been born, he said. The hope of avoiding hardship in the first year after the war was by a very sharp fall in the birth rate now.

Co-operation Pays.

There are some districts in Alberta which have abundantly proved the truth of this note from the current issue of Board's Day:

"We very often hear the statement made that the farmer is independent. While it may be true that the farmer is more independent than men engaged in some other industries, yet he, too, is dependent on his neighbor for many things. Suppose that ten farmers in a neighborhood establish a reputation for high-grade cattle. Soon they create a good market for all their surplus stock. But let one of these men sell two or three inferior animals as superior ones, and he has cast a blot on the reputation of the ten."

"Community co-operation means the production of more profitable farm animals; more effective and economical advertising; the establishment of breeding centers; higher average prices for live stock; personal acquaintance with the live stock of your fellow, leading to greater success in breeding, care, and management; and a tendency to overcome the necessity of importing breeding animals."

We are advised by the British Columbia Forest Service that the series of 10 Bulletins on Farm Buildings which they prepared in co-operation with the University of Saskatchewan, have attracted much favorable attention from the agricultural authorities of the prairie provinces, and also from the farmers who have obtained copies. A number of farm journals are printing extracts from the bulletins for the benefit of their readers.

In many ways these bulletins appear to be the best and most comprehensive publications on farm buildings that we have seen. They cover practically the whole range of farm buildings from hen houses to dwelling houses.

The bulletins are obtainable from the Chief Forester, Victoria, B.C., and every farmer will do well to obtain the ones dealing with the buildings in which he is interested.
